
Abstract of the Disclosure

Diagnosing Candida infection can be achieved by obtaining a biological sample from a subject at risk of or suspected to be suffering from Candida infection, contacting the sample with a mannose-depleted antigen composition, which contains a soluble cytoplasmic antigen preparation comprised of antigens of molecular weight 55 kDa, 30 kDa and 20 kDa, and then detecting any antigen/antibody reaction.
